FADE UP ON:

INT. LOOMIS LIVING ROOM - EARLY EVENING

as

HARRY LOOMIS ENTERS. He pulls off his suit jacket, tosses it on the couch, sinks into an overstuffed chair, and clicks on the TV to watch the evening news.

BACKGROUND SOUND: TYPICAL EVENING NEWS

LAURA

Is that you, Harry!

as

LAURA ENTERS, CARRYING BOBO, a child's male doll. She strides to the TV set and snaps it off.

HARRY

Okay, Laura. What's the problem?

LAURA

(holding the doll up)
Bobo is the problem!

HARRY

Sue Ellen's doll? How can he be a problem? She loves Bobo! More than any other doll she has.

LAURA

(sarcastic)
Why not? How many other eight year old girls have a doll with a complete set of male sex organs?

HARRY

C'mon, now, Laura! We discussed all that. And we agreed it was silly to have to explain that every man has a tinkle-tiinkle. And then have to explain why her boy dolls don't.

LAURA

Right. So you went out and bought Bobo, the anatomically accurate Real-Boy-Doll.

HARRY

Even our pediatrician thought it was a very, well, interesting idea.

LAURA

Well, it seems that Mr. Jerome Grogan doesn't agree with our pediatrician.
